In the seventies, Manuela, a nine year old girl finds herself trapped during her holiday in her grand-parents old rural house, amongst the communist ideals of her atheist father and her grandmother’s catholic dogmas.

They are fighting for the right to define her name and her role in the family. Nevertheless, Manuela will find a way to break her own ties after she finds her crazy uncle hiding in the hacienda’s library. This will change her relationship towards words and names, including hers.
